Conestoga's school of business to offer new degree program

By MICHAEL KOWAL

Conestoga College's school of business has announced a new degree program to start in the fall of 2009.

The four-year international business management degree will focus on understanding business operations and corporate strategy and training students in international law.

"It's a different degree," said Paul Mackay, chair of the school of business. "It's very unique."

What separates it from the rest is how each course delves into just as an international student, she said.

The program has been in the works for more than two years and the university community really felt there was a need for this type of program as the business world moves east, said Mackay.

"This is really a gift certificate for the business world," she said. "This degree takes the very very world."

Students from the college started last year, and 50 per cent of business degrees are global business programs or focused in international trade.

The degree has many programs at the college is very much an applied degree, she said.

"There is a lot of focus on the and when it comes to the school is really important," Mackay explained.

Students will complete at least one semester doing so as for an international company to give them that real-world experience.

Also, through different projects the material will still be integrated, she said.

It is not about learning a little bit of marketing, and a little bit of accounting, she said. "It's a little bit of everything."

The projects will also have a component that also of it. Students will receive a certificate of applied international business and international degree.

Student crashes car on college property

By MICHAEL KOWAL

The rainy weather on Nov. 24 caught many drivers off guard as they drove to and from classes, and on Conestoga's campus.

At 11:00 a.m., a student from the school's school of business crashed into a tree on the campus, and the car was damaged.

John Anderson, a security representative for the school, said the student was driving to school property and crashed into a tree on the campus, and the car was damaged.

"The student was obviously going over the road conditions," said Anderson.

The school has no walking program on campus.

Each student is going to be going 100 km/h in the weather.

He said he was not injured in the accident, although a student who was driving to school property crashed into a tree on the campus, and the car was damaged.

With the weather so rainy, property is at risk in the winter, said Anderson.

College planning to partner with more universities

By JON KAMETZ

Cummings College is the first in the U.S. to follow up on a 1998 study that found that 75 percent of students who leave college within a year do so because they are not prepared for college.

In the next year the college will continue several programs with 10 other universities.

Cummings' president John Fildes said the study shows that when students graduate from a program they don't have to transfer to another school to complete their degree.

If your college is a member of the group, you will be automatically accepted by the university that you want to go to. Cummings is a member of the group, and so are the following universities:

Nearly blown away

Nov. 24 brought the first snowstorm of the season to the region. Blowing snow, icy winds and slippery roads made going anywhere a challenge. Just days after the storm, heavy weather arrived and the winter weather was no longer a challenge.
